

ONE SHEET BOOK

This is also sometimes called a hot dog book, for mystery reasons.

- All you need for this book is a single sheet of paper. Perhaps start with an A4 sheet.

- Fold the sheet in half; fold it in half again; fold it in half a third time.

Your sheet is now folded into 8 rectangles.

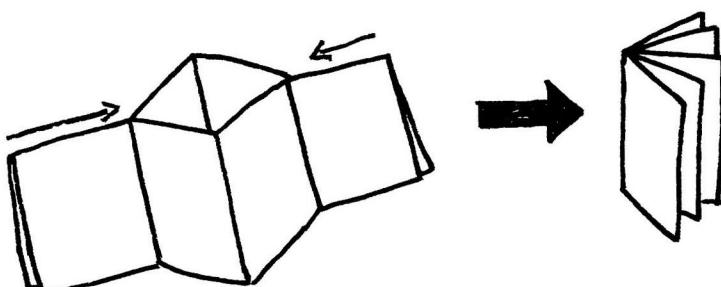

- Open the sheet out until it's folded in half vertically, like a birthday card. Cut along the folds in the centre of the sheet, for the width of two rectangles - you will cut from the fold inwards.

- Fold the sheet in half again, this time horizontally (like a hot dog?!). Pinching the two ends, push together so that you have a diamond shape in the centre.

- Press together and fold - and fold the other 'pages' together too. Hey presto, you now have a little book with 8 pages.

NOTES

- This is a great book for kids, since it's so simple and doesn't require any stitching or glueing.
- A lot of people make zines in this format, since it's quick and cheap to produce, and just big enough to express one fun idea.
- Content-wise, remember that you can write/draw on the pages, but that the book also opens out to the full sheet - you can have a 'poster page' on the reverse.
